

I chose to put these pictures of Jill on this page because I wanted to show people that you never gain knowledge or expand your life until you experience something first-hand. Jill is tasting the keys of the piano; she will soon learn that the keys do not taste good, but if she pounds them they make a pleasant sound.

People, experiment to find out about life; spend that extra hour you can never spare enriching yourself and the people around you. Try to see life in another light once in a while.

I experienced editing this Derrick. People are so willing to help but somehow never have time. I would like to thank Tina Sullivan for joining the staff in June and sticking it out until we (she & I) finished the book. Another person who spent many hours raising money from advertisements was Mercedes Jacobson. Thank you. The 1977 Derrick was finished on July 14, halfway into the summer.

—Sue Stillings

Old Days

Darkened dreams of good times gone away

Old Days

Days of love and feeling fancy free

Old Days

Days of magic still so close to me

— Chicago