

Juniors: Class of 2010

Finally upperclassmen, the juniors have grown over these three years. They all have changed in their own individual ways. Junior year is a fun one because there isn't any pressure of choosing a college and you have more freedom in choosing what classes you actually want. But along with all of the freedom comes some requirements such as American History.

With this being the first year for trimesters we all had to experience just five longer classes and three exams instead of two. Zach Trisel had something to say about trimesters "I really don't like trimesters because all of the teachers had to try and teach everything much faster, even with the longer hours it doesn't make a difference. It just adds more pressure to the students and sucks all the fun out of class." Along with figuring out how to deal with trimesters, the juniors had to take multiple tests including the MME and ACT. On top of all of that there was the stress of other classes, sports, and extra curricular activities.

Junior year wasn't completely stressful, there were friends and the nice teachers that didn't give you homework every night. Taylor Gepford had this to share about her junior year "So far this year has been my favorite I had so much fun at all the football games, mixers and the new hockey games. I can't wait to see what senior year will bring." Even though junior year is a stressful one, we all have managed to make it through alright, gained good experience and made some fun memories that we will always remember.

Float building is always a blast. After all the hard work the juniors, that showed up to help make their float for Homecoming posed to get a silly picture. Even though the juniors got 4th place with their float they still had fun hanging out with each other and making their float look good.

Taking a break from swimming were Emily Paik and Bianca Villemont. They really enjoy swimming and hanging out with friends, whether its after school, at practices or during swim meets.

Cheering on their fellow classmates at a home hockey game against Bay City were Katie Swindell and Merisa Vander Loon. They both had crutches due to their knee injuries but they still managed to make it to the game and have a good time.

Doing some light reading were Amy Wilson and Sam Papa. The two were in Mrs. Laskowsky's class. Sam and Amy both loved having Laskowsky as a teacher. They said "She's so smart and fun we just adore her!"

During the homecoming parade the Junior Class Representatives Spencer Way and Liz McBryde threw candy and waved hello to the crowd. Liz said that "Being on court was so awesome! I loved every minute of it." Spencer and Liz both really enjoyed each others company on this long ride around the block and being a part of homecoming.

Performing part of the juniors mock rock were Alenna Beroza and Jonny McCann. Since the juniors theme was MTV this year, they decided to have the NEXT TV Show be part of their mock rock. Where Alenna's goal was to find the perfect homecoming date, which ended up being junior Jonny McCann.
